Re: Gaza, CPH and Zionism

Editor:

Nan Abrams' letter to the editor in last week's Journal (Mailbox, May 23) allows that «the campus protesters are likely not antisemitic,» but dismisses that as «irrelevant» because, Nan claims, «they are enabling an antisemitic moment.» That's some really twisted logic. What she is saying, in effect, is exactly what the Israeli government has been espousing — that Palestinian lives are irrelevant because Hamas controls Gaza. Nonsense. It would be just as erroneous to claim such a thing as it would be to blame all Jewish people for the traumatic events the Israeli army has been inflicting upon Palestinian civilians in Gaza every day since Oct. 7.

If Nan Abrams wants to fret about whose actions might be allowing antisemitism the largest opening at the moment, she need look no further than the current Israeli government.

Lamar Hudson, Briceland

Editor:

Early in her letter Ms. Abrams states, «The campus protesters are likely not antisemitic. But that is irrelevant. They are enabling an antisemitic moment.»

If Ms. Abrams is correct in her assumption that the pro-Palestinian campus protesters were not antisemites, an assumption I share, her subsequent opinion that their innocence is «irrelevant» begs the question: If not from the campus protesters, whence cometh the antisemitism in that «antisemitic moment?»

Her ensuing five paragraphs provide a potpourri of selective history, abridgement of Jewish persecutions, and whitewash of Zionism's imperialist tendencies, but do not identify the source of the antisemitism she perceives.

Attaining statehood when, in the wake of World War II, Britain and France offshored Europe's «Jewish problem» to Palestine, Zionism went from being a peaceful expression of the national aspirations of the oppressed Jewish people to becoming a heavily armed nation-state with its Zionist might enforcing its Zionist «right» to oppress Palestine. Many, maybe most, past and present nation-states have displayed similar behavior ... indicating «Jewishness» was/is irrelevant in the oppression of Palestine.

But Zionism ... in 1948 and under the guise of the Jewish State of Israel ... started weaponizing the victimhood Jews had endured for millennia to obscure its imperial pretensions. Planning, coordinating and waging oppression on Palestine was requiring ever more vociferous threats of antisemitism to silence bleeding hearts and to minimize empathy and aid for Palestine. Seventy-five years later, antisemitism has become ambient in Zion, trapped in moments whenever, wherever it confronts opposition.

The historical truth of the relentless oppression of Jews does not, cannot and never will legitimize Zionism's fascistic oppression of Palestine and, thereby requires antisemitism to become its body armor.

Alex Ricca, Blue Lake

Editor:

The Israeli-Palestinian conflict has claimed tens of thousands of lives and displaced millions of people while having its roots in a colonial act carried out a century ago. Hamas fighters killed more than 1,200 Israelis in assaults on southern Israel. In response, Israel launched a bombing campaign in the Gaza Strip, killing more than 35,000 Palestinians.

Previously these assaults involved the internationally banned weapon, phosphorus gas. It has mobilized troops along the Gaza border, for a ground attack, finally reaching Rafah (at one point a designated safe zone by the Israeli Occupying Forces). They have announced a «total blockade» of the Gaza Strip, stopping the supply of food, fuel and essentials to the besieged enclave in an act that under international law amounts to war crimes.

In 1917, Britain's then-foreign secretary, Arthur Balfour, wrote a letter to Lionel Walter Rothschild. It committed the British government to «the establishment in Palestine of a national home for the Jewish people.» European powers promised the Zionist movement a country where Palestinian Arabs made up 90 percent of the population.

In April of 1936, the Arab National Committee called on Palestinians to go on strike, withhold tax payments and boycott to protest British colonialism. Even before the British mandate expired, Zionists were destroying Palestinian towns and villages to erase Palestinian history.

The Zionist movement captured 78 percent of historic Palestine. The remaining 22 percent was divided into the occupied West Bank and the besieged Gaza Strip.

In my lifetime, Israel has launched five assaults on Gaza: in 2008, 2012, 2014, 2021 and now 2023. Tens of thousands of Palestinians and children have been killed, thousands of homes, schools and offices have been destroyed. Rebuilding has been next to impossible because the siege prevents construction materials, such as steel and cement, from reaching Gaza.

Allan R Anderson III, Eureka

Editor:

Whatever one thinks of the student demonstrations at Cal Poly Humboldt and around the globe, history will show how they ended nations' self-censorship of the words "apartheid and genocide" suffered by Palestinian civilians.

A debt of gratitude is due Cal Poly Humboldt students and the NCJ coverage of their protests.

Law-enforcement's militarized response merits significant reform, as well as, the university administrations that called them, both largely sharing military backgrounds and thus, the military's zealous intolerance for disobedience to authority, often against their own interests, for example, when ordered to beat other veterans that occupied the White House lawn demanding the G.I. Bill.

NCJ letters (Mailbox, May 23) bicker over which side is more "indigenous," Palestinians or Israeli Zionists, distracting from the 14,000 Palestinian children killed by U.S. and German weapons (hundreds or thousands more buried under rubble and mass graves).

Recent rulings against Israel by the International Court of Justice and the International Criminal Court were free from any delusion that an atrocity merits genocide.

South Africa (ICJ complainant against Israel) reminds us of Apartheid's 1980 "Bantustans," where black escapees killed as many whites as they could find; North Vietnamese escaped their "strategic hamlets" to do the same or Nat Turner's slave rebellion and Native American Red Cloud escaping the reservation.

Every society organized to advantage privileged individuals builds walls to protect against the revenges of poverty and oppression, walls that grow commensurate with the institutionalized corruption of public policy by oligarchs, monarchs, dictators and petty tyrants, even though collapse is the fate of every walled civilization in human history.

Altering a self-destructive trajectory as old as "civilization" begins with a simple unasked question in every community. Which local multimillion dollar investments of public and private capital contribute to, or reverse today's socio-economic walls destined for collapse?

Netanyahu and one letter writer cite the "Jewish state" and that Israel is "reclaiming" their ancestral promised land. This letter writer uses the standard race card of "white colonizers" and claims Jewish populations that never ever occupied the land.

Arab semites and Jewish semites (they are both semites) alternately occupied the land. Arabs cite Ishmael as the first son of Abraham, and Jews cite Isaac as the first "legitimate" son. Both claim that God said they are the "chosen people."

Israel's intentions are clear. Netanyahu's October Amalek "our Holy Bible" citation exhorts Israel to kill every man. Every woman, every child, every baby. Israel's military head refers to Palestinians as "human animals" and to "mowing the lawn."

This is not a war. The Palestinians have no airplanes, no tanks, no bulldozers, no 2,000 pound bombs, no billions of U.S. dollars. Hamas has 100 hostages, Israel has 10,000 (or is it 2,500,000?). This is just a righteous, bloodthirsty slaughter in order to make room for a greater Zion.

Netanyahu and Biden demand that student protests be stopped because they are antisemitic. But the whole world already sees Israel's genocide and has already reacted. If there is antisemitism, the American Jews identifying with Israel are the additional victims of Netanyahu's atrocities.

Thank you Dr. Schnnurer for your thoughtful and wide-lens reflections regarding the CPH protests ("In Defense of the Occupation of Siemens Hall," May 16). As a fellow faculty member, I share so many of your perceptions of what took place and what was gained from the efforts. To read such nuanced reflections in contrast to Mark Johnson's shallow, law-and-order interview especially resonated deeply ("False Narratives," May 16). May those of us invested in CPH as a place of continuous learning and evolution take this to heart into the coming semesters.

Humboldt based on reports from administration or things you've seen on social media, then you have been sharing a distorted version of reality. I encourage you to stop speaking, take a walk on campus and listen to the voices of the students and community members who were there. Their stories are powerful and many hold visions for a beautiful world where we are all free from the oppressive forces of state violence. These are leaders willing to put their bodies on the line for the people. Not because they're getting a paycheck to do it, but because they are acting from their hearts.

In contrast, police and CPH admin got paid for this debacle and then misled the public. They stated that there's "$1.7 million in damages and emergency operations costs." But those are two different things. Tell the public the actual price range for the damage alone. Please include a low-cost bid where you let people volunteer to help clean up and paint. Disclose to the public the cost of emergency operations separately. The decision to bring in hundreds of outside agitators (aka police from outside Humboldt County) is on administration. Who's going to pay the bill for their poor decision-making? This whole situation could have been resolved through mediation, but the administration chose to act from fear instead of a grounded respect for the students they serve and the Arcata community in which they live and grow. I request a public apology from Tom Jackson and Mark Johnson for their unethical actions.

The people arrested at CPH on Beltane Eve should be cherished. I pray that the freedom called for in their songs opens hearts throughout our community and the greater world.

'An Unfounded Bias'

Editor:

Richard Engel's criticisms of Greg King's call for a Manhattan project for Solar rooftop (Mailbox, May 16) reflects an unfounded bias for centralized electricity generation, shared by his Schatz colleagues and Redwood Coast Energy Authority (RCEA), that explains why RCEA has no widespread distributed solar program (WDS).

Engel offers other renewables but they all destroy habitat, and "cannot feasibly be captured with individual household systems," whereas WDS on the built environment, where the power is used, has minimal impact; and WDS is ideally suited to household and public buildings and spaces, perhaps a benefit not appreciated by those wishing to control our electricity.

Bonus feature: Solar panels are eminently recyclable.

Engel argues for a diversified energy portfolio, yet RCEA has no WDS program, only centralized, resulting in both costlier solar and "skyrocketing electric rates," along with the loss of the local employment associated with scaled-up solar deployment. Worse, we are also deprived of the security and resilience that come with the energy independence of WDS.

The reality is that all of our electricity comes from large centralized facilities: PG&E burns fracked natural gas, biomass pollutes worse than coal and accelerates mechanized deforestation. RCEA's greenest program buys electricity from distant habitat-fragmenting solar and wind arrays (the desert tortoise is now endangered under the California ESA), and hydro from watershed-killing dams, transmitted over long, incendiary distances, vulnerable in disasters.

WDS, associated with micro and nano grids, can supplement SoHum's (and Humboldt's) future power needs, help balance the grid and facilitate our transition away from fossil fuels for transportation, heating, cooking and tool use.

We need a Division of Energy Resilience at RCEA dedicated to covering our built environment with solar photovoltaics, exploiting available technologies and all private and government incentives in order to support public and private solar opportunities across all income levels.

Ken Miller, McKinleyville

'The Most Cogent Explanation'

Editor:

Many thanks to Barry Evans for his article on the mRNA vaccine and its discoverers ("mRNA Vaccines vs. the Pandemic," May 23). It is the most cogent explanation I know of (after all this time!) on how the vaccine came to be and how it works, plus a wonderful human-interest story. I had doubts about the vaccine at first, but went ahead from the first shot through my latest booster this spring. This gives me confidence I did the right thing. No COVID. Hooray for science!

Judith Brown, Eureka

The Death of Participatory Democracy

Editor:

An assumption at the base of the concept of participatory democracy is the basic goodness of its participants — fairness, rational thought, the understanding that “community” means living together in peace and with fairness.

That idea of communal and mutually beneficial democracy has been thrown under the bus with the rise of the Hate Right, the MAGAs, the unforgiving, the uncompromising fearmongers who might live right next door.

“We’ll see you at your house,” is the headline of a recent New York Times article, which describes how public officials from Washington to Redding, California, are being driven from public service by those empowered by hate and self-righteousness.

Public officials live in terror of the people they serve, from presidents to senators to county supervisors and clerks. “We’ll see you at your home,” one Bakersfield man told his city council. “We’ll murder you.”

As a journalist, I can’t forget the Baltimore Capital Gazette murders by Jarrod Ramos, who killed five journalists by shotgun in 2018, egged on by then-president Trump, who didn’t like criticism.

Trump has now renewed his call for violence. “Mr. Trump, the presumptive Republican presidential nominee, refused to rule out violence if he were to lose in November. ‘It always depends on the fairness of the election,’” The Times reported. This is the man who directed supporters to storm the Capitol and execute his own vice president.

Criticism, fairness, level-headedness — and the public debate and discussion should follow — are essential to American democracy. In 1644, when John Stuart Mill wrote, “Let [truth] and falsehood grapple,” his assumption was a “free and open encounter” among differing opinions. That freedom is crushed by those who will neither participate nor listen to free and open debate, and who make up their minds to pursue violence instead of rational thought.

Ted Pease, Trinidad

Judge Kreis 'Censured and Barred' in Agreement to Close Ethics Case

Former Humboldt County Superior Court Judge Greg Kreis has resolved the ethics complaint lodged against him by the Commission on Judicial Performance, admitting to 17 charges that he violated the code of judicial ethics and agreeing to be publicly censured, resign his position and never seek judicial office again.

Kreis, whose campaign to retain the seat he was appointed to in 2017 was rocked by the commission's case against him and was soundly defeated at the polls in March, declined to comment when reached by the Journal.

The stipulation resolving the ethics case, which was approved by a unanimous vote of the commission, sees Kreis admit to 68 specific allegations of misconduct, though not the most salacious ones in the complaint initially filed against him.

"Much of Judge Kreis' misconduct relates to his failure to disclose his relationships with seven attorneys; his familiarity with individuals involved in matters before him; or the extent of his relationships with the individuals, in at least 44 cases over which he presided," the stipulation states. "This type of misconduct is serious. The purpose of California's statutory disclosure requirements is to ensure public confidence in the judiciary. A judge's persistent failure to comply with these requirements reflects an unacceptable lack of concern about the public's perception of the integrity and fairness of the judiciary."

In addition to failing to disclose friendships and other relationships with litigants in his courtroom, Kreis admits in the stipulation to being discourteous and making inappropriate comments to litigants and attorneys, and to grabbing or slapping a woman's buttocks after she'd explicitly told him not to one night in November of 2018.

"Sexual misconduct severely undermines public esteem or the integrity of the judiciary," the stipulation reads.

"Treating women disrespectfully, including unwanted touching, reflects a sense of entitlement completely at odds with the canons of judicial ethics and the role of any judge. Sexual misconduct has no place in the judiciary and is an affront to the dignity of the judicial office."

The stipulation represents a stark contrast from the formal answers Kreis previously filed to the charges leveled against him, in which he denied nearly all of them and maintained he had not done anything unethical. (Kreis did admit to slapping the woman's buttocks in 2018 but said he thought she'd been "kidding" when she told him not to do it and that he apologized immediately, having realized his mistake.)

Kreis' resignation was effective May 27, according to the stipulation, and the Humboldt County Superior Court issued a press release May 28 advising that Judge Kelly Neel will be taking over as presiding judge and that visiting judges will fill Kreis' seat until Judge-elect April Van Dyke takes office in January.

Appointed by Gov. Jerry Brown in 2017, Kreis had practiced law for about 14 years prior to joining the bench. He filled the role of interim public defender briefly after Kevin Robinson's retirement, and later served as the county's conflict counsel. Most of the cases in which Kreis failed to disclose relationships with lawyers practicing in his courtroom centered on friendships he'd made while working in the public defender's office.

While the public censure and barring Kreis from holding judicial office again represents the most severe sanction the Commission on Judicial Performance can impose on a judge who has resigned or retired, the stipulation does not address the most salacious charges Kreis had faced, those that prompted the case to make national headlines. Specifically, Kreis did not admit allegations that he directed antisemitic comments at a deputy public defender, that he used cocaine, including once while driving, sexual assaulted a passed-out co-worker and friend, lied to hide a workplace affair, getting someone fired in the process, and drove a car while drinking alcohol.

In entering into the stipulation, Kreis agrees that facts recited to buttress each of the counts he admitted to are “true and correct,” and that the discipline agreed to “is appropriate in light of those facts.”

In addition to failing to disclose personal relationships with attorneys and litigants in his court, Kreis also admitted to other misconduct, including violating litigants’ due process rights, issuing arbitrary rulings, making false statements, losing his temper in court and abusing his judicial authority. He also admitted to making inappropriate comments in court, joking once about killing a deputy public defender, implying that another was late for court because he’d been drinking at a local bar, saying in open court he wished a local attorney would “disappear” and, prior to joining the bench, calling a deputy district attorney a “bitch.” Additionally, he admitted to making sarcastic comments about family law litigants, and to having inappropriately recorded videos for his re-election campaign from his judicial office.

“Judge Kreis’ conduct in treating attorneys and litigants poorly, making inappropriate, sarcastic and gratuitous comments to them ... undermines public perception of the integrity and impartiality of the judiciary,” the stipulation states. “Everyone appearing before Judge Kreis should be assured that he would dispense justice fairly and respectfully. His conduct and remarks did not inspire confidence that he would do so.”

The stipulation also notes that Kreis should have known better, noting he’d been disciplined by the commission in 2018 for similar conduct.

“He received an advisory letter in 2018 for the following remarks about a criminal defendant during a sentencing hearing: ‘He’s a dirtbag of the highest order ... What’s kind of burning me up right now is the fact that he was paid more than I’m paid, to sell cars, and then he stole money on top of it. How pathetic is that?’”

If the commission and Kreis had failed to negotiate a stipulation, the matter would have moved to the formal proceedings stage, with the case heard by a panel of three “special masters” — judges selected by the California Supreme Court to preside over the hearing. These special masters would then have prepared a report of the hearing’s findings of fact and conclusions of law, presenting them to the Commission on Judicial Performance for action.

It’s incredibly rare for cases to proceed to that stage. In 2022, the commission processed 1,385 complaints, 1,294 of which were closed after the initial review stage. Of the 91 cases that proceeded to an investigation, 60 were closed without discipline, while 29 resulted in discipline and two were closed after the involved judge resigned or retired. Only one case that year reached a formal proceeding. In 2022, just one case resulted in a judge being censured.

In the stipulation, the commission addresses why it felt resolving the case against Kreis was appropriate.

“The judge’s agreement to resign effective May 27, 2024, and not to seek or hold judicial office, effectively reaches the same resolution as removal, affords protection to the public, enforces rigorous standards of judicial conduct and maintains public confidence in the integrity of the judicial system in the most expeditious manner by avoiding the delay of further proceedings,” states the stipulation, which was signed by Kreis on May 1 and approved through a unanimous vote of the commission May 15.

Kinetic Grand Championship 2024

By Jennifer Fumiko Cahill

The gears ground, the flames shot and teams of Kinetic Grand Championship racers tumbled down the dunes of Dead Man's Drop and into Humboldt Bay for the water crossing. When the clever contraptions finally passed the finish line on Ferndale's Main Street after their 50-mile journeys, there were winners and ACE-ers, but all were Glorious.

HumBULLdt Pie Factory, a riveted (and riveting) bovine behemoth, took the race by the horns for the Grand Champion trophy. First prize in Engineering went, fittingly, to Beaver Fever's dam on wheels. AI Apple Intelligence took the Art and Pageantry trophies. And for sheer speed, Hobart Here's the Whos was victorious, finishing with a breathless time of 9:32.

Photographer Alexander Anderson captured highlights of the three-day tour from the splash and crash zones. See the full slideshow at northcoastjournal.com.

What's Good: Stirring the Pot

By Jennifer Fumiko Cahill

jennifer@northcoastjournal.com

Soup's on at St. Vincent de Paul

Veteran restaurant cook and ceramicist Mark Campbell has found his niche in the annual Empty Bowls fundraiser for St. Vincent de Paul's free dining facility ("Filling Empty Bowls," May 25, 2023). His ceramics training at Humboldt State University and his years working, then volunteering for the nonprofit kitchen serving the homeless and hungry make him the perfect point person for the event that groups across the country have used to raise money to feed those in need: soup buffets with artisan bowls for sale. This year, with new partners, he's getting ready for an even bigger soup to-do.

On June 6, from 5 to 8 p.m., a bevy of more than 200 handmade bowls will be up for auction while attendees feast on soups from local restaurants and eateries at the Eureka Conference Center ($25, $40 for two, $45 per family). This year, the list includes: Humboldt Bay Bistro, Bayfront Restaurant, Nou Nou's food truck, the Greene Lily, Vista Del Mar, Szechuan Garden, Manzanilla Kitchen, Ramone's Bakery and Café, Cap's food truck, Restaurant 511, Big Blue Café, Blue Lake Casino, Murphy's Market, Cal Poly Humboldt, Diver Bar & Grill and the Pub at the Creamery. "We're gonna have about 14 soups out at a time," says Campbell, who notes there will be a couple of chowders and at least one gumbo, but mostly the soups will be a surprise. "It's the only event where you're gonna have like 20 good restaurants next to each other in the same building."

The St. Vincent de Paul team will have a pot going, too. "I'm gonna make something vegan," says Campbell. "I know there's quite a few people who will go as long as there are some vegan options." This year, he'll be working with a new partner, too, as fellow volunteer May Sirich-aroen, who hails from Thailand and brings her experience working as a chef in Los Angeles, will be stirring the pot alongside him. Typically, the two brainstorm over the available ingredients at the dining facility on Wednesdays, "then we knock it out on Thursdays." Campbell talks about Siricharoen's cooking and use of flavors with open awe and says he's excited for what she'll come up with for Empty Bowls.

Along with more hands in the kitchen, Campbell has more artist help, too. Last year some 70 bowls came from the kilns at Cal Poly Humboldt, but the campus closure quashed those plans. The Fire Arts Center has stepped up to fill the gap, as have other artists. When Campbell found himself overwhelmed with a dozen formed bowls, he reached out to ceramic artist Cate Be (like Campbell, an NCJ Best Craft Artist winner), who glazed and fired them, yielding their first collaborative pieces.

Reaching out to folks on his Clay Buddies Facebook page, Campbell scored more than 100 bowls from potters across the country. The prolific and aptly named Donna Potter of Mission Hills Pottery in Nevada sent 50. "I thought I was good making 40. She sent me 50 and I was like, 'You win.'"

St. Vincent de Paul's kitchen is an operation that appreciates volume. "We've served about 4.5 million lunches out of that place," says Campbell. He says the annual cost is around $250,000, for which the operation relies on donations and grants. Last year's event raised approximately $7,000 for the kitchen and he's hoping this year's event at a larger venue will bring in more.

Campbell can't think of a better setup. "We've got really talented, skilled chefs that are making some wonderful food, and same thing with the artists," he says, "and we're getting together to feed the hungry."

Patrons lined up for their last meals at Japhy's.

Last Call for Soup at Japhy's

Tera Mar and Kate Manley showed up at 10 a.m. to stake out the first spot in line for a last meal from Japhy's Soup and Noodles on May 23. The restaurant announced its closure days earlier after a quarter century in business and the line for its final lunch service stretched up the block to Northtown Coffee.

"We've been coming here for 25 years, and we had to get one last Thai chicken curry and cold noodle salad," Mar says. "And cornbread." Under their cafe table, their 17-year-old miniature Dachshund Ming rests her white face in her paws. "She'll get a piece of my chicken," Mar adds.

Both she and Manley started coming to the shop when they worked at Humboldt State University. They remained steady customers, even picking up takeout during the height of the pandemic. Like many loyal regulars, they appreciated the filling bowls for low prices, as well as vegetarian options that went beyond green salad and macaroni and cheese.

When original owners Josh and Miwa Solomon opened Japhy's 25 years ago, Manley recalls, "It was the only place for food like this ... Asian comfort food." That has changed in Arcata and elsewhere over the decades. Up the hill from Japhy's stands Pho Hoang, where Thai green curry and hot bowls of pho are on offer. More upscale ramen can be had in town at Nori and Sushi Spot, and there are whispers about a new noodle joint opening nearby.

Owner Josh Hand opens the door at 11:30 a.m. and the line flows to the counter, with customers offering thanks and regrets. Asked about the closure, he dips his head and says he'll essentially be turning Japhy's back over to its original owners, who won't be reopening.

Behind the counter, staffers fly between the rice cooker and the five pots of soup, occasionally glancing up at the line through the window. One tells a customer she doesn't expect to make it to the usual 8 p.m. closing time before selling out.

At the pickup counter, a woman with gray hair picks up her Thai chicken curry soup and rice and gives a wan smile. "Thank you," she says. "I'm gonna cry."

No Alibi

While the Journal was unable to contact the Alibi's owner Justin Ladd by press time, the doors to both sides of the Arcata institution — old and new — have closed following a farewell weekend packed with regulars and Kinetic revelers. The storied bar built a loyal following with late-night music shows and early morning Bloody Marys. If this closure is indeed permanent, it leaves Everett's as the last bar standing on the so-called Tavern Row. Cheers, friends. ●

music@northcoastjournal.com

I'm going to keep this one brief because I'm on the backend of the long weekend and reeling from some bad business that went down on Kinetic Saturday. I'm talking about the last call at one of my longtime favorite watering holes, the Alibi. I had a farewell cocktail there after work the day before and missed Saturday's shutdown because of my aversion to crowds. I have a lot to say about this and almost none of it is fit to print, so I will stick with a quick observation. In my view, from my side of the bar, the reasons for the place getting shuttered has absolutely nothing to do with its wonderful staff, for whom I have only affection and care. Nor do the regular patrons, casuals and wandering tourists share any blame. That's it.

Like many Alibi regulars, I didn't spend the last decade-plus jamming out late at night, or reading or chatting with friends in the courtyard or splendor of either bar, all while dropping a mortgage-worth of money over that time on drinks and food to suffer this foolish loss.

Tip your bartenders and servers, and have a wonderful week.

Thursday

It's the last Thursday of the last month before the summertime, which means our options are usually some mix of scant and quaint, so let's spin the wheel and see what pops up. OK, how about the Open Mic Jam at the Logger Bar, hosted by Soul Trip, starting, I'm guessing, after 7 p.m. and free. What's that you say? Another spin? Your wish is my command. Here's another freebee that starts after 7 p.m. (probably an hour later, I'd hazard). Over at the Basement, you can enjoy the Claire Bent Jazz Quintet fronted by one of the more versatile singers of our area.

Friday

Local roots rock, boogie and blues-infused, country-side, all-star act The New Pelicans is joining up with another, albeit more established, act of stellar local players when they share the Humbrews stage with Rooster McClintock at 8 p.m. ($10). This is a great pairing, as the rambling string band picking fun of the renewed iteration of the Handshakers should serve as a great companion sound to the honky tonk-ing heat brought by the Rooster Boys. What a perfect way to summon the coming spirits of summer.

Saturday

It's the second — and last — night of the Eureka Symphony's latest offering, "A Study in Contrasts." On the program are two favorites of mine, Shostakovich's Violin Concerto No. 2 (his final concerto) and the ninth or "New World" Symphony by Dvôrák. Both pieces are considered late-career masterworks by their respective composers. Though separated by more than 70 years of violently dynamic history, each opus has something to offer the other by means of contrast, the often triumphal majesty of the symphony is a great foil to the damaged, paranoid beauty of the concerto. I'm going to take this opportunity to plug a favorite novel The Noise of Time, by Julian Barnes, which offers a pretty good submersion into the life and mind of Shostakovich as he explores the U.S. as a Soviet cultural ambassador and writes his mid-career works literally under the gun. I am certain that, as always, director and conductor Carol Jacobson will deliver the goods. We have a fine symphony here, folks, go enjoy it! It's at the Arkley Center at 7:30 p.m., tickets range from $19-$49. Viva.

Sunday

As an "Oregon Trail" millennial, I'm the perfect age to wax rhapsodic about loving the original Star Wars trilogy, while having strong opinions about the later franchise offerings. However, while I am many things and not all of them virtuous, I am not a nerd, so I have little interest in wading into those oily waters. I am a shameless lover of a big spectacle, so the opportunity to see the middle — and heaviest — film of the original three on the big screen is a good thing. The Eureka Theater is showing The Empire Strikes Back, the most perfectly balanced middle point of the helmet-and-lightsaber saga. I'm sure the magic has worn a bit thin since I was a child, but I was also a brooding and not very happy kid, the kind who didn't understand why anyone would be anything but stoked to have Darth Vader as a father.

The Crown City Bombers play the Arcata Veterans Hall at 7 p.m. on Tuesday, June 4.

Courtesy of the artists

Anyway, I'm not above saying this seems like a great time. The matinee is at 2:30 p.m., and tickets are $10 general, $5 for children 12 and under, which presumably doesn't include fan boys from the legions of manchildren circling the outer planets of the galaxy.

Monday

It sure ain't Valentine's Day, but that's not stopping the good folks at Savage Henry Comedy Club from putting on a Broken Heart Care-Eoke — that last word sounds better in the head than it looks on paper — at 9 p.m. For $1, you can step up to the mic and croon a heartbroken tune or share a story of being in dumpsville. And while I doubt that even the most potent potions brewed up by the late CIA evil scientist and MKUltra big bad-daddy Sidney Gottlieb could coerce me into such activities, to each their own. Pour one out for the broken-hearted, if you are so inclined.

Tuesday

The Arcata Veterans Hall is always a fun venue for catching shows and the only one in the county (I'm aware of) that has a nice big cannon parked out front. Tonight's headliners are a rockabilly band from SoCal called the Crown City Bombers, a name I am certain looks really great embossed on the back of a bowling shirt. The band is nine albums deep into its career, so you know these cats are lifers, and they play a mix of vintage rockin' classics as well as originals in the style thereof with a great deal of skill. Slide on by after the doors open at 7 p.m. to see what's cooking, and make sure to catch something good from local trio Idle Spurs ($15).

Wednesday

Ana Egge is a Canadian-American singer-songwriter, and guitar builder based out of Brooklyn, New York. Her tunes are well-written, and walk on those lovely, gilded splinters set between the converging pathways of modern folk, country and bluesy jazz. I dig it. Check her out at the Old Steeple tonight at 7:30 p.m., a place that I can virtually guarantee is so perfect for her vibe it will feel like a collaboration. It's $25 if you walk up and pay, $21.50 for advance tickets. ●

Collin Yeo (he/him) lives in Arcata, a town that is increasingly bumming him out.

Raised Stakes at The Prom

By Tiggerbouncer Custodio

Warren Hardison, Lily Herlihy and Jessy McQuade in The Prom.

Courtesy of Ferndale Repertory Theatre

As giggling teens heckled, "You're GAY. We're all GAY," from an open second-story window, echoing off the buildings of downtown Ferndale, and an unfortunate side street detour led us to a church marquee reading, "Ferndale Reps The Prom is Anti Christ and Pro LGBTQ," the importance of playing stakes in theater productions was solidified. Stakes are what quicken the heartbeat and raise the energy level of actors who achieve the ever-present motivation of what may befall a character should they fail their objective. The higher the stakes, the stronger the drive and, subsequently, the deeper the investment for the audience. Ferndale Repertory Theatre's new production The Prom, amid its zany hilarity, incredible performances and technical prowess, has a deep message. For this show, in this time and in that city, its impact raises an already good production to the next level.

In Bob Martin and Chad Beguelin's The Prom, self-absorbed Broadway actors Dee Dee Allen (Jessy McQuade) and Barry Glickman (Warren Hardison) decide on a gimmick to revitalize their reputations after their show flops with brutal reviews. Armed with their PR rep Shelly (Sarah Traywick), and flanked by struggling actors Trent (Merrick D. Yra) and Angie (Liz Erenberger), they hilariously inject themselves into a media controversy where a high school PTA in Indiana cancels prom due to lesbian student Emma (Lily Herlihy) wanting to attend with her girlfriend Alyssa (Grace Humphreys). As the actors devise ridiculous ways to appear altruistic — protesting the PTA meeting that has already decided to produce an all-inclusive prom, staging an LGBTQ acceptance song at a monster truck rally and organizing television appearances — Emma struggles with the attention and is ostracized.

Director and choreographer Jessie Gelormino assembled a talented production crew amid a very difficult technical show with multiple location and costume changes. Lighting by S.M. not only adds dimension to Jaiden Clark's clever set design with beautiful color palates but also mover specials that add texture and movement. The opening tableau immediately impresses with vibrance, and a heart created by two perfectly placed lights spilling onto a red velvet curtain encompasses a perfect message. With some minor adjusts and a curtain, they create a high school, a hotel, a Applebee's, a New York restaurant, offices and a bedroom, to name a few. Though some spaces could be defined more by stiff light lines and masking of some stationary pieces, the changes are satisfying and impressive. For a touch more reality, Roux Kratt's property design could include more working pieces, as actor's miming sips from glasses that are obviously not full of liquid and a hand referencing a Bible strain illusions. Still, their choices make sense. Shay Heitzman's costume design is fantastic, especially if you love shoes and glitter, though Dee Dee needs diamonds and furs.

All the actors are solid in their performances. Standout Herlihy, already a veteran community actor, is a superstar with sweetness and venerability. Once she fully owns how good she is, there is no limit to this young talent. Hardison refrains from offensive gay stereotypes and is the right amount of zany and loveable. Yra is masterful with his energy and control. His presence makes everyone funnier. Veronica Ruse as PTA leader Mrs. Greene makes her despicable character relatable with powerful acting. I am always impressed with Traywick as one of the best actors in the county — this role is no exception.

I think of my experience after the show and what its repercussions would be if I were a questioning Ferndale youth or a struggling adult who may have never experienced acceptance. The show gave me the energy to laugh it off. When everyone involved with this production thinks about the gift of energy like that in these circumstances, the stakes are instantly realized. As the production continues and their gift gets more defined, I encourage you to stand with them in their truth. Not only to vanquish fear, but to experience joy and be empowered to simply laugh everything else off.

Ferndale Repertory Theatre's production of The Prom continues Fridays and Saturdays at 7:30 p.m., and Sundays at 2 p.m. through June 16. Visit ferndalerep.org or call (707) 786-5483.

What Should I know About COVID-19?

Three of a series of four

Should children get vaccinated?

Although older adults are at most risk, COVID-19 can also make children and teens sick. Once the vaccine is available for children, it will be the best way to protect them. The vaccines have shown to be safe and effective against the worst effects of COVID-19 and the more members of a household vaccinated the safer for everyone.

What are the risks of not vaccinating?

Although it is not unusual to have a sore arm or cold-like symptoms, for a couple of days after getting vaccination, the vaccine is shown to be safe and effective against COVID-19. Most COVID-19 infections, hospitalizations, and deaths are in unvaccinated people. We are finding out that COVID-19 can lead to serious long-term heart and lung issues, and other health complications.

Furiosa: A Mad Max Saga

By John J. Bennett
screens@northcoastjournal.com

FURIOSA: A MAD MAX SAGA. A friend — and greater cineaste than I — having very recently watched and enjoyed Furiosa, conveyed to me his abiding concerns for the future of cinema. And, if we are to trust the recent, ubiquitous reports of box office “failure,” his fears could be justified. But, as likewise pertains to the impending end of the world as we have known it, the horrifying confluence of human malfeasance, viral dominance and the planet finally sloughing us off, I think the movies will be just fine; we just won’t be around to enjoy them.

Trapped as we are in the high-frequency cycling of tension and release, led on by the need of the arbiters (soon to be subsumed by artificial intelligence?) to simultaneously scintillate and disappoint, to leave us all wanting more of the stuff we know is poisoning us, physically and psychologically, it is a not-unnatural response to the state of things to interpret and intone looming disaster in the “poor performance” of vivid, vital, exciting film art. To be fair, it seems a truism that a younger generation remains far more interested in “content generation,” as we sour old bastards might call it, than in the focused energy required to create longer-form art that requires prolonged and directed attention.

But short-term prognostication, based on the dwindling theatrical half-life of what we once were drawn to as cultural oases, points of apolitical connectedness and beginnings of ongoing conversations, can only tell part of the story. We still live in the noxious day-after: In this case, the possibly permanent hangover of the plague years but also in the comedown from the Barbenheimer bacchanal many of us interpreted as the beginning of something. What, really, is supposed to fill the vacuum created by a weekend when a kaleidoscopic, candy-colored vision of girlhood crashing into the existential angst of the rest of life, and a meditation on humanity’s capacity and compulsion to end itself transcended the doldrums of reality, both of which brought us out of our darkened rooms and into a slightly larger, almost-communal one.

Yes, last year was a big one for the movies, and one that may have marked the end of an era for a certain type of recently dominant intellectual property. But the fact that every weekend hasn’t boasted a billion-dollar earner may mark a beginning, rather than an end of things.

As evidence, I would present the very existence of Furiosa, an interpolative sequel/prequel in a doom-saying franchise now almost 50 years old. It is easy to forget, for those of us among the faithful, that Mad Max: Fury Road (2015), for its accolades and ticket sales, was also met with a effluent tidal wave of anti-feminist opinion that attempted to diminish the vision of George Miller and company by decrying its transition of focus from Max (Tom Hardy) to Furiosa (Charlize Theron) and the women (read: the future) she has chosen to protect.

Furiosa presents the decades-spanning origin story of its titular protagonist, she born of the place of abundance, the child of a great warrior (Charlee Fraser, recently seen in the unlikely hit Anyone But You). As a child, Furiosa (Ayla Browne) wanders too far afield and is abducted by the moto-berserkers of Dementus (Chris Hemsworth) and drawn to the center of the war for control of the wasteland. Hiding among the warboys of Immortan Joe (Lachy Hulme), she (played in adulthood by Anya Taylor-Joy) climbs the ranks until she falls into the favor of Praetorian Jack (Tom Burke), legend of the Fury Road, and enacts a plan to find her way back home.

Lest we forget, nine years ago, Fury Road served as a desperately anticipated relief from the day-to-day garbage of normal moviedom. Having become jaded by the vagaries of the ending world and the awkward transition of the movie business, it is easy to forget that the median excitement level at the multiplex may actually be higher than it has been in a decade. As ever, the audience at large may be a little slow on the uptake and the organs of note certainly aren’t doing anybody any favors with their doom-saying. But Furiosa is madder and more furious than Fury Road, which makes it about as bonkers and satisfying as any big-screen extravaganza can be. Miller continues to accomplish the seemingly impossible, expanding the drama and scope and color and texture of the post-world world of his imaginings, without sacrificing any of its original grit and guile. Taylor-Joy continues her streak of riveting, often unlikely performances, and Hemsworth, often unrecognized for the humor and complexity of his non-Thor work, is a pitch-perfect comic foil with true menace (and maybe more than a few nods to Heath Ledger's joker).

That one Kinetic teammate who brings the intensity.
Furiosa: A Mad Max Saga

The movie sustains a pace and style unrivaled in cinema history, with stunt sequences and world-building of such detail and daring that two and a half hours of running time pass by in a revelatory, adrenalized rush.

NCJ WASHED UP

The Parchment Worm Turns

By Mike Kelly
washedup@northcoastjournal.com

A cluster of parchment worm tubes.

Flydentifier: "What's going on guys? It's your pal Flydentifier with another livestream during which I'll fly around helping perplexed beachgoers identify washed-up things. I'm now hovering in front of our first customer."

Surfperch Angler: "What the hell ...?"
Flydentifier: "Ahoy, honorable surfperch angler! You have found a cluster of still-living parchment worms, which is a rare find. This worm's scientific name is Chaetopterus variopedatus. They occur in nearshore waters all over the world, though some scientists think there are actually several species. But either way, they make excellent surfperch bait. So, that's a great find for you, kind sir."

Surfperch Angler: "No shit."
Flydentifier: "Hey livestream subscribers, please donate any amount you can using the app in the chat. And don't forget to smash that 'like' button!"
Surfperch Angler: "Are you making money off me?"

Flydentifier: "Not yet, but my panoply of followers is super supportive. Now, parchment worms are a type of polychaete, or bristle worm. This species can be over a foot long and it lives in a tube constructed of a tough parchment-like material. Typically, the tube is U-shaped and buried with each end protruding from the substrate. Though in deeper areas it may be attached to bedrock and can form clusters like this one. The worm pumps water through the tube to filter it through a mucous net and catch food particles, which consist of small plankton and detritus. Isn't that fascinating, expert angler?"
Surfperch Angler: "I couldn't care less, asshole."
Flydentifier: "Parchment worms look unlike your typical worm. They have many segments like a lot of worms, but the segments are arranged into three distinct subsections. The head section bears a row of bristles on each side and a central longitudinal groove containing hairlike cilia that beat to move the food-laden mucous net toward the shovel-like mouth. This section also secretes the material used to make the tube. The second subsection is made up of four fatter segments. The first of these secretes the mucous food net, and the next three segments bear fan-like extensions that pump the water."

Surfperch Angler: "Take that!"
Flydentifier: "Whoa! He thrust his fishing pole at me like a fencer. See how I parried his thrust with one of my wings? En garde! Anyway, the third subsection of the worm is longer and made up of many segments bearing paired leg-like appendages. These appendages help the worm excavate its tunnel. It does all that work and then only lives for a year. Did you know that, my exalted outdoorsman?"
Surfperch Angler: "No, but did you know you can kiss my ass?"

Flydentifier: "This species has other fascinating traits. It can eject a glowing blue or purple bioluminescent fluid that it presumably uses to confuse predators. The fluid is full of bacteria, which are what produce the luminescence. But oddly, the worm itself is blind so can't see its own glorious secretion. And if it is injured, it can produce an entire new individual worm from just a single segment. Additionally, other animals may live within the tube alongside the worm host. These include pea crabs that reside almost exclusively in Chaetopterus tubes. Please check to see if there's anyone else living in these tubes, noble sportsman."

Surfperch Angler: "No, but I'll do this!"
Flydentifier: "Whoa, he's casting hooks at me. Oh no, I'm snagged. Fly away! He's gaining line ... OUCH!"
Surfperch Angler: "Gotcha, you bastard! Gimme that phone. You viewers better donate some money to me, or else. Hey, you only have one viewer."
Chat: LOL. And I'm just here to see him get his ass kicked again. ●

Biologist Mike Kelly (he/him) is also the author of the book Tigerfish: Traditional and Sport Fishing on the Niger River, Mali, West Africa. It's available at Amazon or everywhere e-books are sold.

Only bids submitted via the Internet will be accepted. Pre-registration is required. Register on-line at www.govease.com by June 7th, 2024 Bidders must submit a refundable deposit of $2,500.00 electronically, or by certified check at www.govease.com. The deposit will be applied to the successful bidder's purchase price. Full payment and deed information indicating how title should be vested is required within 48 hours after the end of the sale. Terms of payment are limited to wire transfers or Certified Checks. A California transfer tax will be added to and collected with the purchase price and is calculated at $.55 per each $500 or fraction thereof.

All property is sold as is. The county and its employees are not liable for the failure of any electronic equipment that may prevent a person from participating in the sale.

The right of redemption will cease on Friday June 7th, 2024 at 5 p.m. and properties not redeemed will be offered for sale. If the parcel is not sold, the right of redemption will revive and continue up to the close of business on the last business day prior to the next scheduled sale.

If the properties are sold, parties of interest, as defined in California Revenue and Taxation Code Section 4675, have a right to file a claim with the county for any excess proceeds from the sale. Excess proceeds are the amount of the highest bid in excess of the liens and costs of the sale that are paid from the sale proceeds. Notice will be given to parties of interest, pursuant to California Revenue Taxation Code section 3692(e), if excess proceeds result from the sale.

NOTICE OF PETITION TO ADMINISTER ESTATE OF
CAERWEN WILLIAMS
CASE NO. PR2400140

To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors and persons who may otherwise be interested in the will or estate, or both, of CAERWEN WILLIAMS
A PETITION FOR PROBATE has been filed by Petitioner RICHARD JAMES WILLIAMS
The petition for probate requests that RICHARD JAMES WILLIAMS be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent.
THE PETITION requests the decedent's will and codicils, if any, be admitted to probate. The will and any codicils are available for examination in the file kept by court.

THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.)
The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority.

A HEARING on the petition will be held on June 20, 2024 at 1:31 p.m. at the Superior Court of California, County of Humboldt, 825 Fifth Street, Eureka, in Dept.: 4, Room: 4

For information on how to appear remotely for your hearing, please visit <https://www.humboldt.courts.ca.gov/>

IF YOU OBJECT to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.
IF YOU ARE A CREDITOR or a contingent creditor of the decedent, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within the later of either (1) four months from the date of first issuance of letters to a general personal representative, as defined in section 58(b) of the California Probate Code, or (2) 60 days from the date of mailing or personal delivery to you of a notice under section 9052 of the California Probate Code. Other California statutes and legal authority may affect your rights as a creditor. You may want to consult with an attorney knowledgeable in California law.

YOU MAY EXAMINE the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a Request for Special Notice (form DE-154) of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in Probate Code section 1250. A Request for Special Notice form is available from the court clerk.

Pony Express Days Parade - June 1, 2024

Listen up, folks! We've got some news for ya regarding the Pony Express Days Parade. On Saturday, June 1, Central Avenue between Murray Road and School Road will be TEMPORARILY CLOSED. The parade kicks off at 11 a.m. sharp from the mighty Murray, gradually makin' its way down Central Avenue. Fear not, for the roads shall reopen once the parade passes. But, here's the deal, pardners: those motorists who failed to plan ahead might find themselves stuck without a way to reach their own humble abodes.

If ya find yourself needin' to navigate 'round town during the parade, it might be wise to give some extra thought to where ya park that trusty automobile of yours. Or, better yet, why not saddle up your trusty bicycle or ride your mighty steed? That way, you'll be granted the right of way and breeze through with ease.

Now, let's all keep our cool and enjoy the grand spectacle of the Pony Express Days Parade. Remember, it's a time to embrace the spirit of the West and celebrate our vibrant community. So gather 'round, prepare yourselves, and revel in the excitement that fills the air. Yeehaw!
